SUPPLEMENTARY REPORT

In

NGT O.A. 67 of 2022 in order dated 17.3.2023

In compliance of Hon'ble NGT order dated 17.3.2023, an Interim report was submitted on 18.7.2023 by Central Pollution Control Board. Further, this supplementary report is prepared by covering the following pending work for the consideration of Hon'ble Tribunal:

1. Analysis report of the soil quality
2. Impact of brick kilns on the air quality grid-wise/district-wise. Performance evaluation of brick kilns w.r.t the background concentration and carrying capacity of the area.

1. ANALYSIS REPORT OF THE SOIL QUALITY (impact of brick kilns operation on loss/degradation of top soil)

To study the impact of brick kilns operation on loss/degradation of top soil, the methodology adopted in NGT O.A. 1088 of 2018 Dinesh Chahal & UOI was used in this study. To assess the loss of top soil due to brick kiln activity, soil samples (from upper 15 cm layer) were collected by the CPCB team from the land where top soils had been removed for brick manufacturing. For assessing loss of soil fertility due to brick manufacturing, samples of top soil (from upper 15 cm layer) were collected from the same land where soils were not yet removed from brick manufacturing. In places of brick kiln activity where such un-dugged soils could not be clearly identified visually, surface soils were collected from nearest agricultural lands for comparison.

Total 16 soil samples were collected during in 9th June to 10th June 2023 from 03 districts viz. Sriganganagar, Churu & Ajmer from agricultural land & mined out area to assess the soil quality for total 10 parameters viz. pH, EC, Organic Carbon, N, P, K, Fe, Mn, Zn & Cu. The samples were analysed by ICAR-Indian Institute of Soil Science, Bhopal institute for required analysis.

Outcome of the analysis results:

The soil samples were air dried, processed and sieved through 2 mm sieve. The processed soil samples were analyzed for various soil fertility parameters. The pH and electrical conductivity (EC) of soil samples were measured in soil: water solution of 1:2 ratio, whereas soil organic carbon was estimated by following a wet oxidation method (Walkley and Black, 1934). Plant available micronutrient was extracted by the DTPA extractant (Lindsay and Norvell 1978) and analyzed in ICP-OES instrument. Available nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium content in soil was estimated following standard protocol (Av-N (Kjeldahl method; Subbaiah and Asija, 1956), Av-P (Olsen et al., 1954), Av-K (ammonium acetate extraction; Hanway and Heidel, 1952). The result indicates that variation in soil fertility parameters exist among the sampling sites. For comparison of soil parameters, mean values obtained from all agricultural field sample (site 1,3,5,7,9,11,13,15) were compared with mean value obtained from all brick kiln sample (site 2,4,6,8, 10,12,14,16) were used. It is evident from the result that the soil parameters indicating the soil fertility status like organic carbon (OC), available, N, P, K, Fe, Mn, Zn and Cu are significantly lower in the brick kiln soil as compared to agricultural surface soil sample indicating reduction in soil fertility due to brick kiln and may result in decline in crop productivity.

The results are as tabulated below:

Estimation of physical supportive capacity based on PM₁₀

The formula for assessing the supportive capacity is based on the physical boundaries (Box-model) that works on assumptions of steady-state conditions; i.e. it is supposed that the emissions, wind speed and characteristics of air available for dilution will not vary over time and that pollutants emitted to the atmosphere are uniformly mixed in a volume. Considering this, it is better to call it physical supportive capacity.

Physical Supportive Capacity (z) = Assimilative Capacity (y) - Total Estimated Load (PM₁₀) (X_{PM10})

NOTE:

1. The numerical value with (-) symbol indicates that area has no available physical supportive capacity.
2. The numerical value with (+) symbol indicates that area has available physical supportive capacity.

The assessment of carrying capacity based on the available CAAQMS data of 07 districts for FY 2021-22 reveals that in all the 07 districts, the supportive carrying capacity during November to April is NEGATIVE. The most of the months i.e. 11 months with negative supportive capacity were observed in Alwar & Jodhpur. As reported there is no brick kiln in operation in Jodhpur. Jaipur is the third district where 9 months observed with negative supportive capacity. In Jaipur & Dausa districts total 183 brick kilns are established.

Further, if Alwar & Bhiwadi's Ambient Air Quality data of FY 2021-22 considered separately than Alwar has only negative supportive capacity during 03 months (November to January) whereas Bhiwadi has 11 months with negative supportive capacity except in September month. However, Alwar has 149 brick kilns out of which 147 converted to Zig-zag, irrespective to that Bhiwadi has only 04 zig-zag technology based brick kilns in total. Bhiwadi is an industrial town in Alwar district. The month-wise AAQ w.r.t. PM10 is as tabulated below:

2.2 ASSIMILATIVE CAPACITY OF RAJASTHAN (GRID-WISE DISPERSION METHOD)

Assimilative capacity of atmosphere is assessed using its ability to dilute and ventilate pollutants by advecting it away from its source of generation. Dilution of pollutant is a function of atmospheric mixing height, which is diurnally and seasonally varying parameter. Ventilation is a directly proportional to atmospheric mixing height and horizontal wind speed. In order to assess the temporal variation of dilution and ventilation of dry arid region, weather research forecast (WRF) generated hourly mixing height is determined for an area west of Kota city (Latitude: 25.15; Longitude: 75.62). The same data is used for visual presentation of hourly and monthly variation of mixing height and ventilation.

Fig. 1.1 Shows the diurnal variation of hourly mixing height using box plot. Six months data is given in each page. The X-axis is time of the day and Y-axis is the hourly mixing height. The box shows minimum, first, second and third quartile and maximum value of hourly mixing height. For example, during January, mixing height at a particular hour for each day is put together in a box and arranged in different quartile groups. The scale of Y-axis is fixed at 2500 m. This helps in comparison among different months. It can be seen that during November to January, the mixing height is relatively low compared to maximum mixing height of April to June. In the same figure, mixing height during evening and night time for January and June is compared. It can be seen that during winter (January), the night time mixing height is very low, limited within 100 m, whereas during summer (June), the night time mixing height is more than 500 m. Thus, during summer months, atmospheric high atmospheric dilution is available compared to winter months.

The comparison of mixing height during different months in terms of percentage is shown in Fig. 1.2. Hourly mixing height is normalized between 0 and 100 and shown as box plots. It can be seen that during January, the maximum day time mixing height is about 40% of the maximum mixing height. Thus, the dilution available during winter months is only 40% of the June months' dilution.

Daily maximum mixing height of each day for a month is used for plotting the box of quartiles for that month. It can be seen that for winter months that is December and January, the mixing height is lowest and therefore air pollution emission related activity should be restricted during these months.

Vertical extent of atmosphere provides dilution; however, horizontal wind provides advection of pollutant from its source of origin. Therefore, if the wind speed is high, the accumulation of pollutant will not take place near its source of origin, however, if the wind speed is low, accumulation of pollutant takes place. A measure of ventilation is product of mixing height and wind speed. Therefore, hourly ventilation is determined and plotted in the same way as done for mixing height. Fig. 1.4 to 1.6 shows the similar diagram with similar interpretations.

Ambient Air Quality Data Of Rajasthan

The impact of brick kiln emission is assessed by monitoring air quality in the vicinity of brick kiln. Such a monitoring work requires designing a monitoring network around the brick kiln and monitoring the parameters at regular interval. However, no such dedicated monitoring network exists and therefore, air quality monitored by existing continuous ambient air quality monitoring stations (CAAQMS) can be used for understanding the general status of air quality in Rajasthan. Some of these CAAQMS may or may not be close to the brick kiln. Therefore, all CAAQMS data in Rajasthan is used for analysis. Four years CAAQMS data from 2019-2022 is downloaded from CPCB web site and analysed for PM₁₀, PM_{2.5}, SO₂, and NO₂. Fig. 1.7 shows the box plot of four years daily average concentration of PM₁₀ and PM_{2.5} for different CAAQMS location. The data is for four years during 2019 – 22.

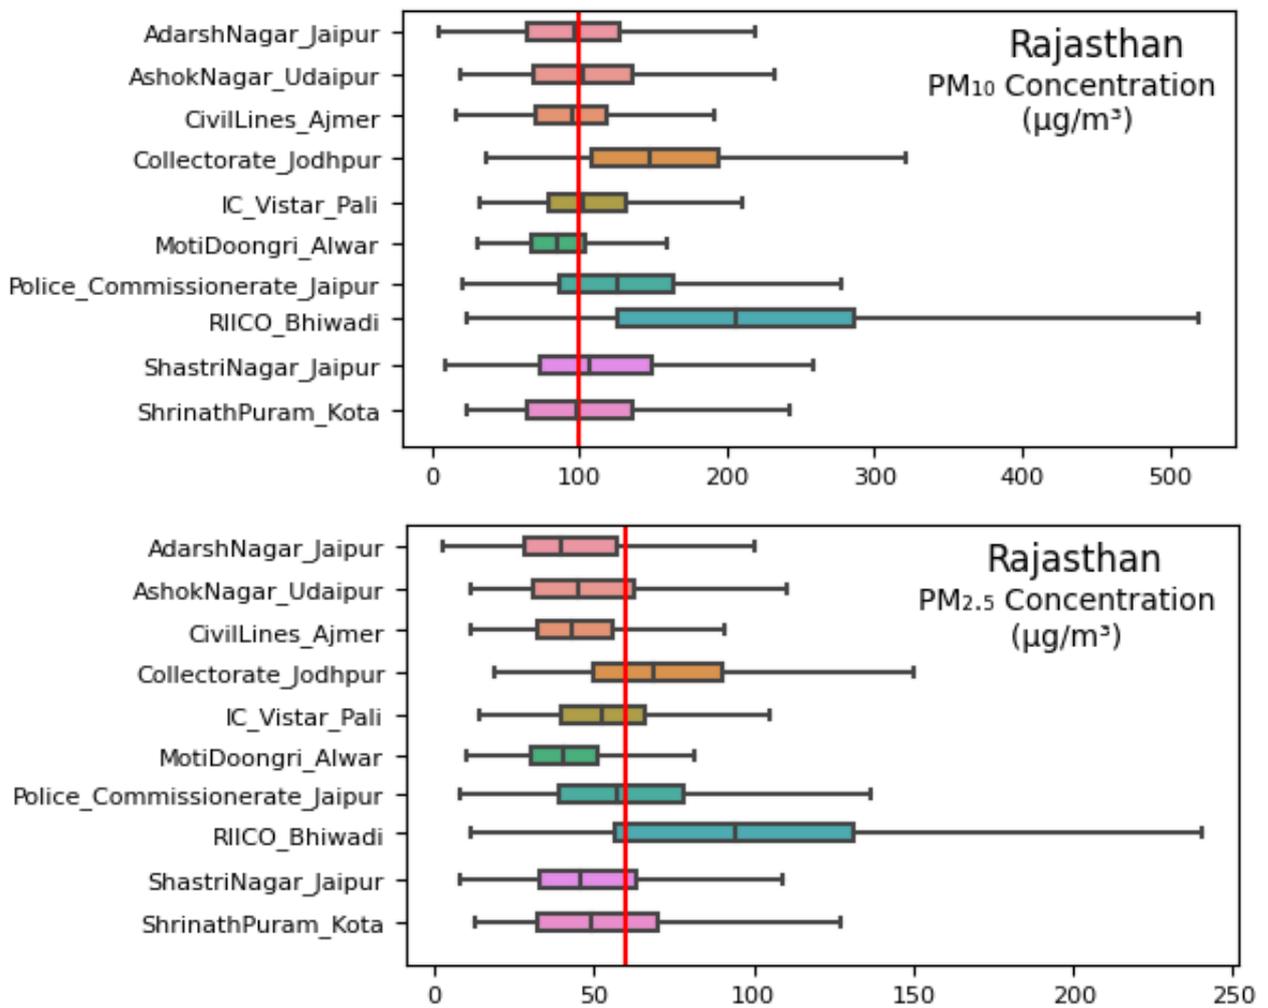

Fig. 1.7: Box plot of daily average ambient air PM₁₀ and PM_{2.5} concentration in different sites in Rajasthan.

It can be seen that second quartile (50%) of PM₁₀ exceeds the regulatory limit of 100 mg/m³ at most of the stations. It may be noted that these stations are from urban area of Rajasthan.

Ambient air concentration of gaseous pollutant SO₂ and NO₂ are shown in Fig. 1.8 in different urban sites. It can be seen that SO₂ levels except at Bhiwadi are much below the regulatory limit of 80 mg/m³. Fourth quarter of SO₂ at most of the site are below 20 mg/m³.

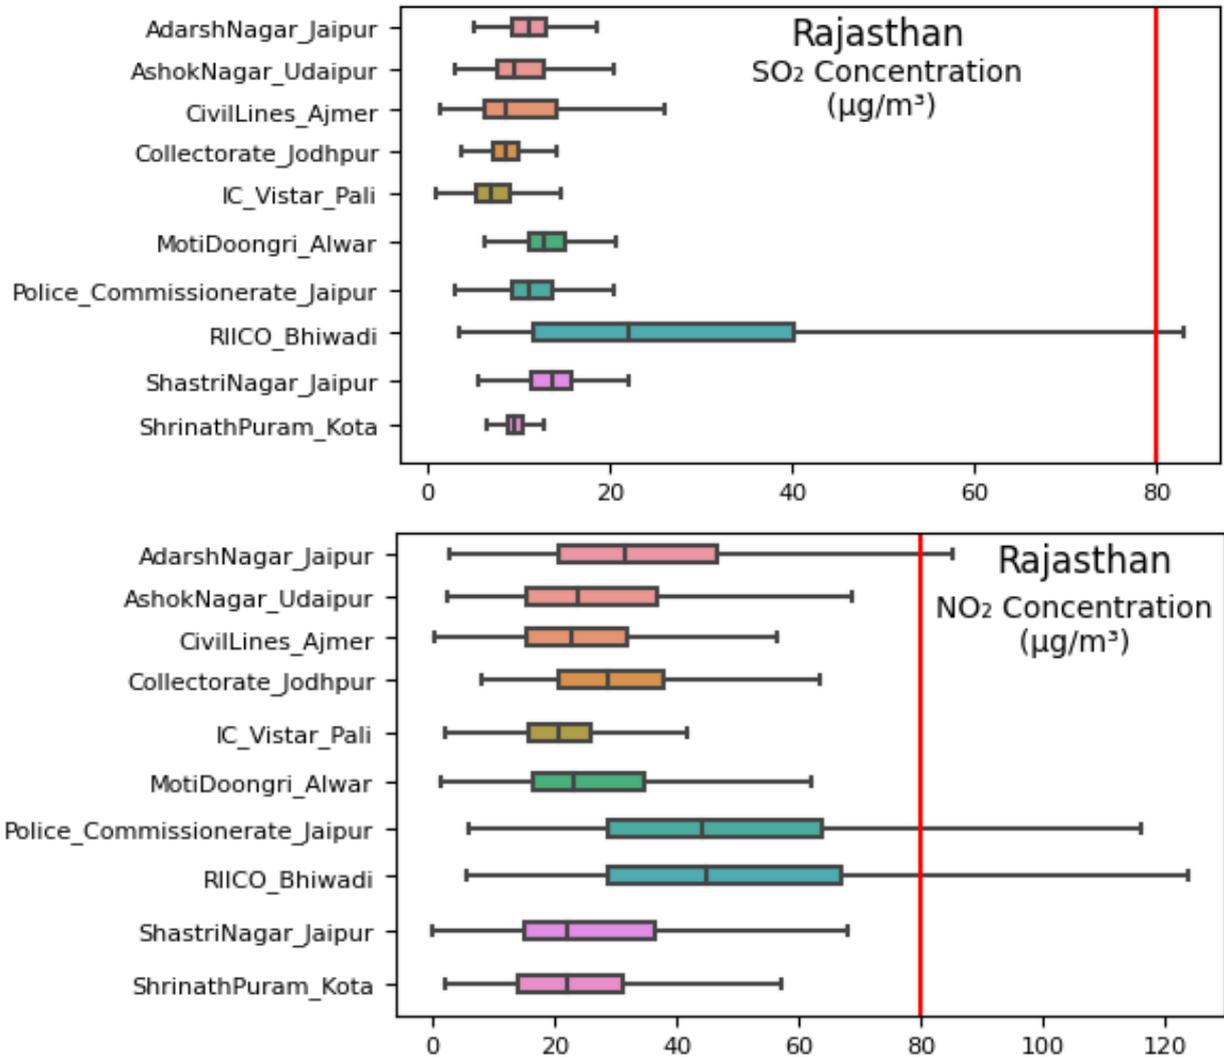

Fig. 1.8: Box plot of daily average ambient air SO₂ and NO₂ concentration in different sites in Rajasthan.

Further NO₂ values shown in Fig. 1.8 are also below 80 mg/m³. However, the average values are around 40 mg/m³. This shows NO₂ values are in general more than SO₂. This is an indication of dominance of vehicular emission.

Brick kilns in Rajasthan

As per the brick kiln survey reports received from RSPCB there are total 2037 brick kilns established in 24 districts/cities of the Rajasthan. Out of these 269 are of Zig-Zag type & rest 1768 are on FCBTK. Out of these 1768 brick kilns, 21 FCBTK Brick kilns dismantled the kilns operation in Bharatpur. There are 08 districts viz. Sriganganagar, Bhilwara, Hanumangarh, Bharatpur, Alwar, Dholpur, Jaipur & Jhunjhunu having more than 100 brick kilns. The NCR region's kilns of Alwar & Bharatpur districts operated during March to June for 4 months; whereas in other districts the operation period is of 5 to 8 months i.e. October to June. Majorly mustard residue, biomass is the fuel used by the BKs. For the production 1000 bricks, 300kgs fuel is used and on an average daily 12-13 thousands bricks are produced that requires 3 Tons of fuel. The details are as tabulated below:

The Cluster-Wise Analysis Of Brick Kiln Impact On Air Quality

Simulation of dispersion of emission from brick kiln in cluster is carried out using Gaussian Dispersion Model named Industrial Source Complex Short Term (ISCST). The model considers emission from kiln and disperse it under the influence of meteorology. The following emission is considered for simulation:

- Stack height – 30m
- Emission rate – 11g/s (~1000Kg/day)
- Stack top diameter - 01 m
- Exit gas velocity – 01m/s
- Exit gas temperature – 333 K

As per the requirement of ISCST Model, the meteorological data on hourly time basis for one full day is derived from Weather Research Forecast (WRF) model. Worst Case scenario predicted using winter time meteorological data generated by Weather Research Forecast (WRF) model. Table 1 shows the WRF derived data used in the simulation exercise. Stability class for each hour is derived from the other meteorological parameters i.e. solar radiation depending on the time of the day. The one day meteorology of January month (winter period) is considered which gives the worst case scenario.

Table 1: Meteorological data used in ISC Model.

Figure 1 shows the location of brick kiln across Rajasthan. It can be seen that there are some dense cluster of brick kiln. Based on visual judgement, three clusters are drawn and shown in Figure 2. The three major cluster are area of Ganganagar, Alwar & Jaipur (North)-Bhilwara and their nearby towns/tehsil/cities. The receptor grid for Jaipur (North)-Bhilwara cluster is shown in Figure 3. On X & Y direction, there are 21 nodes each in the grid. These equidistant nodes cover all brick kilns in that cluster. Figure 4 shows the grid in Jaipur (North)-Bhilwara cluster.

The Ground Level Concentration (GLC) of particulate matter is shown in figure 5. It can be seen that area close to the brick kiln have concentration of particulate matter (PM) beyond the National Ambient Air Quality Standards, 2009 for PM₁₀ i.e. 100 $\mu\text{g}/\text{M}^3$. Figure 6 shows the receptor grids in Ganganagar cluster. This receptor grid is also of 21 x 21 nodes cluster. The GLC of PM for Ganganagar cluster is shown in Figure 7. The zoom-in view of GLC is shown in figure 8 for Ganganagar cluster. Figure 9 shows the receptor grid for Alwar cluster. Figure 10 shows the GLC of PM of Alwar cluster along with receptor grid on the zoom-in view of GLC as shown in figure 11.

All the GLC shows exceedance beyond the National Ambient Air Quality Standards, 2009 for PM₁₀ i.e. 100 $\mu\text{g}/\text{M}^3$. This is the worst case scenario analysis. The GLC of PM in the vicinity of brick kiln should not be expected to be within the prescribed standard for PM₁₀ if any solid fuel like wood, coal is used for firing.

3.0 Summary

As per the brick kiln survey, there are total 2037 brick kilns established in more than 24 districts/cities of the Rajasthan. Out of these, only 269 are of Zig-Zag type & rest 1768 are on FCBTK. Out of these 1768 brick kilns, 21 FCBTK Brick kilns dismantled the kilns operation in Bharatpur. There are 08 districts viz. Sriganganagar, Bhilwara, Hanumangarh, Bharatpur, Alwar, Dholpur, Jaipur & Jhunjhunu having more than 100 brick kilns. The NCR region's kilns of Alwar & Bharatpur districts operated during March to June for 4 months; whereas in other districts the operation period is of 5 to 8 months i.e. October to June. Majorly mustard residue, biomass is the fuel used by the Brick kilns. For the production of 1000 bricks, 300kgs fuel is used and on an average daily 12-13 thousands bricks are produced that requires 3 Tons of fuel.

The assessment of the impact on soil quality due to brick kiln operation reveals that the soil parameters indicating the soil fertility status like organic carbon (OC), available N, P, K, Fe, Mn, Zn and Cu are significantly lower in the soil near brick kilns as compared to agricultural surface soil sample. This indicates reduction in soil fertility due to brick kiln and may result in decline in crop productivity.

The assessment of carrying capacity based on the available CAAQMS data of 07 districts (Alwar, Ajmer, Udaipur, Jaipur, Kota, Jodhpur & Pali) for FY 2021-22 reveals that in all the 07 districts, the supportive carrying capacity during November to April is NEGATIVE. The most of the months i.e. 11 months with negative supportive capacity were observed in Alwar & Jodhpur. As reported there is no brick kiln in operation in Jodhpur. Jaipur is the third district where 9 months observed with negative supportive capacity. In Jaipur & Dausa districts total 183 brick kilns are established. Further, Alwar & Bhiwadi's Ambient Air Quality data of FY 2021-22 considered separately than Alwar has only negative supportive capacity during 03 months (November to January) whereas Bhiwadi has 11 months with negative supportive capacity except in September month. However, Alwar has 149 brick kilns out of which 147 converted to Zig-zag, irrespective to that Bhiwadi has only 04 zig-zag technology based brick kilns in total. Bhiwadi is an industrial town in Alwar district.

The cluster-wise assessment of the impact of brick kiln on ambient air quality during worst case scenario (winter season) for the 03 major clusters i.e. Ganganagar, Jaipur (North)-Bhilwara and Alwar reveals that, all the Ground Level Concentration (GLC) shown exceedance beyond the National Ambient Air Quality Standards, 2009 for PM₁₀ i.e. 100µg/M³. The GLC of PM in the vicinity of brick kiln should not be expected to be within the prescribed standard for PM₁₀ if any solid fuel like wood, coal is used for firing.

Further, in the months (March to June) when dispersion found significantly well, in those months also the physical supportive capacity is not available; this may be due to lifting of fine particles of crustal sand (being non-cohesive), vehicle movement, agricultural activities and other domestic activities. Further, the assessment of the carrying capacity without considering the other source of pollution and environmental condition is not rationalized and advisable. As the present carrying capacity assessment is based on the physical boundary with steady state (Box-model), it needs to be further assessed in detail by considering brick kiln operation in totality viz. fuel use, fugitive emission, local conditions, agricultural activities etc. The crop residue used in loose form, that contribute in ambient pollution and also the thermal heat is not utilized properly. Briquetting/pelleting of such residue will help in increasing the thermal heat and reduce particulate pollution too. Funnel feeding system for continuous feeding of fuel at constant rate may result in effective combustion.

4.0 Recommendations:

1. A large number of brick kilns are still operating on FCBTK technology. Conversion of brick kiln as per the timeline stipulated under MoEFCC notification dated 22.2.2022 is to be implemented by the brick kilns owners to reduce the air pollution.
2. Based on the earlier carrying capacity study of Rajakhera block, Dholpur & Sriganganagar district and the assessment of the ambient air quality data of FY 2021-22 of 07 cities (Ajmer, Alwar, Kota, Jaipur, Jodhpur, Pali & Udaipur), the regulation on the brick kiln operation may be imposed for the month in which negative supportive carrying capacity prevails.

3. RSPCB shall initiate action against the violators operating the kiln near by the non-attainment cities without converting from FCBTK to Zig-Zag technology.
