The main reason for loss of forest cover is considered to be the following:-

Shifting Cultivation:- The traditional method of cultivation is considered as one of the main reason for such change in forest cover.

Diversion of forest land for various purpose:- A total of 6411.7052 ha (64.11 sq km) forest land has been diverted for various purpose during last 20 years which has accounted for reduction of forest cover in the state.

Replacement of old rubber plantation:- An area of 9019.52 ha (90.1952 sq km) of forest land has been used by TFDPC Ltd. for rubber plantation. The old rubber trees being felled and replaced by new rubber trees. These felling of old rubber trees has also accounted for reduction of forest cover in the state.

Allocation of 131564 families over 186819.5139 ha ( 1868.195139 sq km) of forest area under RoFR:-

An area of 186819.5139 ha (1868.195139 sq km) has been diverted as forest patta over the forest area in the state so far. Under various ongoing schemes rubber plantation have been raised in RoFR lands for livelihood. This has also added to the loss of forest cover in the state, as in many areas forestry crops have been replaced by rubber trees and the trees take time to form the canopy for cover.
